

Production/Copy Editor

Do your friends say you have OCD-tendencies? Do you like to organize? Are you one of those people who hate it when you see a misspelled word? Do you have the ability to coordinate people into a well-oiled machine with a smile on your face?

High Plains Journal, a nationally recognized weekly farm and ranch magazine, is seeking a production/copy editor. This person will manage the flow of copy through the editorial department, including the editing of copy and management of deadlines. In addition, the production/copy editor will check and approve pages before print. The desired candidate will be organized and deadline-oriented, as well as possess an exceptional attention to detail, without being grumpy. Experience in workplace organization is required. Ideally, the successful candidate will have experience in a production of a newspaper or magazine and be well versed in agriculture.

Full-time position located in Dodge City, KS. Benefits include paid vacation, health insurance and 401k and working with some cool people.

Does this sound like your kind of job? Submit a letter of application and resume to:

Holly Martin, editor

High Plains Journal

PO Box 760

Dodge City, KS 67801

Or by e-mail to: hmartin@hpj.com